

IMPROVISATION IN MUSICAL THEATRE

By ANNIE DRAGOO

Understanding basic improvisation skills will help musical theatre performers understand that musical theatre is more than just singing and dancing. It's about using all the tools (voice, body, and mind) an actor has at their disposal to create a character.

This unit focuses more on the improv aspect rather than the musical theatre aspects - in fact students need no prior musical theatre knowledge. Annie Dragoo, creator of the unit, uses this material as her first unit in her musical theatre class. It's a great introduction and will get your students in the right frame of mind to approach musical theatre.

The lessons explore a variety of improv skills such as vocal responses, movement, character study, sensory awareness and culminate in an improv scene and unit essay.

1 - Intro to Improv for Musical Theatre

Students will demonstrate an understanding of improv guidelines by using them in an exercise. This is an introductory improv lesson that is designed to build upon the actors' tools in future lessons.

2 - Improv with Vocal Responses

Students will demonstrate ability to respond vocally by participating in various improvisation activities.

3 - Improv with Movement

Students will demonstrate ability to improvise movement by participating in a various activities.

4 - Improv for Character Study

Students will demonstrate ability to develop a character by participating in various improvisation exercises.

5 - Improv Using Sensory Awareness

Students will demonstrate sensory awareness by improvising an everyday activity while paying attention to as many sensory details as possible.

6 - Improvisation Scenes

Students will demonstrate ability to use voice, body, and imagination/mind together by planning and performing an improvised scene.

7 - Unit Reflection (Essay)

Students will evaluate the value of improvisation in musical theatre by writing a five-paragraph essay.
